WHO'S MY PARENT WHEN I FILL OUT MY FAFSA?

Dependent students are required to report parent information on the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). For reporting purposes, "PARENT" means your legal (biological or adoptive) parent or stepparent, or any other person that the state has determined to be your legal parent.

Use this guide to figure out which parent's information to include (depending on your family situation):

1. Are your parents married to each other?
   - Yes: Report information for both parents on the FAFSA.
   - No: Proceed to the next question.

2. Do your parents live together?
   - Yes: Report information for both parents on the FAFSA, even if they were never married, are divorced, or are separated.
   - No: Proceed to the next question.

3. Did you live with one parent more than the other over the past 12 months?
   - Yes: Report information on the FAFSA for the parent you lived with more.
   - No: Proceed to the next question.

4. Report information on the FAFSA for the parent who provided more financial support over the past 12 months or in the last year you received support.

5. Has this parent remarried?
   - Yes: Also report information for your stepparent on the FAFSA.
   - No: You do not need to report additional parent information.

The following people are not your parents unless they have legally adopted you:
- Grandparents
- Foster Parents
- Legal Guardians
- Other Brothers or Sisters
- Aunts or Uncles

If you're not sure whom to report as a parent, you can visit StudentAid.gov/parentinfo or call 800-4-FED-AID (800-433-3243).

If you're not sure whether you are a dependent student, go to StudentAid.gov/fafsa/dependency
Students who want to submit a FAFSA must create an FSA ID consisting of a user name and password. It may help to think of the FSA ID as an electronic signature that is unique to each user of the Federal Student Aid system.

One parent of dependent students (under age 24) must set up an FSA ID, also.

➔ Go to www.fafsa.gov.

Click on “Create your FSA ID now.”

➔ Please note this information from Federal Student Aid:

Only the owner of an FSA ID should create the account. The FSA ID serves as a legal signature and should not be shared with anyone.

The student’s FSA ID will be used to access the FAFSA, download the student’s tax return from the IRS to the FAFSA, and sign the FAFSA.

The parent’s FSA ID will be used to download the parent’s tax return from the IRS to the FAFSA and to sign the student’s FAFSA.

If a student lives with both parents, either parent may create an FSA ID to sign the student’s FAFSA. One parent may sign the student’s FAFSA, and another parent may sign a sibling’s FAFSA. Parents may also use their FSA IDs to access and sign their own FAFSAs if they are students.

Basic Facts of Student Aid

- Students receive financial aid from a variety of sources. You may be eligible for assistance from the federal or state government, civic or church groups, your parents’ employer or union, or colleges themselves.

- The beginning of your senior year in high school is the best time to start inquiring about financial aid. Your best sources of information are the financial aid offices at the colleges you wish to attend.

- As you research colleges, make sure to visit each college’s financial aid webpage. Make a note of all deadlines, and what financial aid forms are required.

Basic Types of Student Aid

- Grants and scholarships are outright gifts of money that don’t have to be repaid.

- Loans are borrowed funds that usually must be repaid with interest.

- Work-study is an opportunity provided by colleges, to work and earn money.

Student aid often is a combination of all three, known as a financial aid “package.” The amount of your package depends on your financial need. Most federal and state aid is awarded based on financial need rather than academic merit; your financial need is determined by the information contained on your Free Application for Federal Student Aid or FAFSA.

You can find out early if you qualify for federal aid by accessing www.StudentAid.ed.gov/fafsa/estimate, but you will still need to complete the actual FAFSA.

The federal government also assists college students through the Lifetime Learning Credit and American Opportunity Tax Credit — tax credit programs for which you and your family may be eligible when completing your federal tax return. For more information, go to: www.irs.gov/Individuals/Students.

FACTS about the FAFSA

All colleges will ask you to file a FAFSA, and most students do so online at www.fafsa.ed.gov.

You must complete a FAFSA to apply for state and federal financial aid. The information contained in this application is used to determine your eligibility.

You can file your FAFSA as early as October 1 of each year. In order to complete your 2019-20 FAFSA you will use your, or your family’s, 2017 Federal income tax information.

The need analysis service will review your FAFSA. Based on this analysis, you will be assigned an “Expected Family Contribution” (EFC) which is the amount you and your family will be expected to pay toward one year of college costs. The EFC is used to determine your need for financial aid.
Defining Your Financial Need

The need analysis considers your parents’ income, your earnings and your family’s net assets (cash, bank accounts, trusts, investments) to determine your EFC. Home equity is no longer considered in the need analysis calculation for federal and state aid. Home equity may, however, be considered by the college in determining your eligibility for institutional aid.

The need analysis also takes into account some family expenses. These include income taxes paid, number of family members, number of household members in college or vocational school, and your parents’ need to save for retirement.

The colleges to which you apply will review the results of the need analysis to make a final determination on how much you and your family are expected to contribute toward your educational costs. Your financial need is determined by subtracting your expected EFC from the annual cost of your education.

To meet your determined financial need, the college may combine various types of aid into a financial aid package.

This package may include grants, scholarships, a part-time job and loans. If your award includes a Federal Direct Loan, you will need to complete a separate Master Promissory Note.

Some colleges require you to complete forms in addition to the FAFSA, some of which carry a fee. Usually these colleges provide large amounts of institutional aid. They need added information for a more accurate picture of your family’s financial circumstances.

Within two weeks after completing your FAFSA online, you will receive a Student Aid Report (SAR). This report gives information on your eligibility for a Pell Grant. Read it carefully. The college will use the information on the SAR in deciding whether to include a Pell Grant in your financial aid award, if you are eligible.

FACTS about Loans

If you intend to borrow from a federal student loan program to finance your education, consult with your college aid officer to determine the application procedure at that particular college.

The most attractive educational loans are those targeted to financially needy students. These loans – federal Direct Loans and Perkins Loans – require no interest or repayment while the borrower is in school.

Students who do not qualify for need-based aid also have a borrowing opportunity available in the federal Direct Unsubsidized Loan Program.

Parents may borrow through the federal PLUS Loan Program and a variety of supplemental educational loan programs which your college aid officer can tell you about.

As with any loan, make sure you fully understand the interest rates, repayment terms and tax implications. Find out whether interest charges are variable or fixed, whether the loan has forgiveness or deferment provisions, whether you can consolidate the loan with other loans, and whether it carries prepayment penalties. Borrow only what you need. Remember that loans must be repaid even if you do not finish college.

FACTS to Remember

Fact 1: The amount of financial aid for which you will qualify is determined by your financial need. Though your expected family contribution (EFC) will usually remain the same from college to college, your financial need will increase or decrease depending upon the costs of the college.
Fact 2: Your need for financial aid will be more at a higher cost college than at a lower cost school. However, this does not necessarily mean that either the higher cost college or the lower cost college will be able to provide you with financial aid that is sufficient to meet your financial need.

Fact 3: Colleges handle “outside scholarships” differently. In some cases, an outside scholarship will not impact your college aid package; some colleges will reduce your loan portion of the package by the amount of the outside scholarship and others will withdraw institutional grant aid by the amount of the scholarship.

Fact 4: You must apply for aid each year. Always check with your college to find out if they have any application deadlines.

Fact 5: Contact all colleges to which you are applying to learn about financial aid deadlines.

Fact 6: College is a substantial investment, but it’s the most important one you can make for your future. Take time to learn all of your financial aid options before you make any college decision. College financial aid officers can help you find ways to pay for your education.

To Learn More...

Your best resource is the financial aid office at the college or university you wish to attend. Contact financial aid offices at the same time you submit your admission application.

You and your parents also can talk to experts and get in-depth help filling out the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) by attending a College Goal Sunday event. For dates, go to: www.collegegoalsunday.org.

Many career and community organizations offer grants depending on your interests and background. For a list of public and private aid sources, and other college information, go to: www.ciohe.org/SFA.

Often a checklist can help with academic and financial planning. Checklists for elementary, middle and high school students and their parents, prepared by the U.S. Department of Education, are available at www.StudentAid.gov.

Parents—wondering how to pay for college? Start here.

Rob Zodda

What you’ll learn

• What to discuss with your child
• When your child should apply for scholarships
• How federal loans compare to private loans

Maybe the paying-for-college process has changed a lot since your glory days. Or maybe your student will be the first in your family to go to college. Whatever the case, it can be tough to know where to start when it’s time to help your kids pay for college. Try breaking it into steps with this 1-2-3 approach.

1. Use savings, scholarships, and grants

Savings

According to Sallie Mae’s national study, How America Saves for College, the average amount that parents with children under age 18 have saved for college is $16,380. However much you’ve saved, it’s important to set clear expectations with your child before that tuition bill comes due.

Yes, your high school senior is busy (and you probably don’t want to burden them with finances), but if you have an honest conversation now, your student will thank you later. It’s important that students understand what their financial choices will mean for them after graduation.

Make sure you’re on the same page about the answers to these questions:

• Is paying for college your responsibility or does your child have skin in the game?
• How much money has your family saved for college?
• How much savings can your child contribute to their own education?
• Who will make student loan payments, if necessary?

Scholarships

One of the biggest missed opportunities in terms of paying for college is college scholarships. Free money for college that your child won’t need to pay back. They’re offered by colleges, towns, states, religious organizations, companies, non-profits, and more. Scholarships can often range from $500 to more than $25,000.

Scholarships have come a long way—they’re not just for straight-A students and athletes. There are opportunities for kids with any skill or interest:

• crafters
• gamers
• musicians
• future Democrats/Republicans
• volunteers
• film buffs
• lefties
• and more

Your child will need to search, using a tool like Scholarship Search, and apply for scholarships. Applications might require an essay or other submission.

Pro tip:

Parents who have been through the process say applying for scholarships during senior year of high school almost seems late. Juniors can (and should) apply early and often. Think of scholarships as an ongoing item on your student’s to-do list.

College grants are another free money option for college. The difference with grants is that they’re usually given out based on financial need.

For your student to qualify for grants, your family needs to fill out the FAFSA (Free Application for Federal Student Aid), a form that determines how much federal financial aid you’re eligible for.

2. Take advantage of federal student loans

If your family needs to borrow money for college, borrow from the federal government before exploring private student loans. Federal student loans usually have lower interest rates and more flexible repayment options than private student loans.

To qualify for federal student loans, again, your family needs to fill out the FAFSA. You can submit the FAFSA as early as October of your student’s senior year of high school.

Have this info handy when filing the FAFSA:

• Student’s driver’s license and Social Security number
• Parents’ Social Security numbers and birthdates
• Your family’s latest federal income tax returns
• W-2 forms
• Bank statements
• Information on your family’s Investments (real estate, money market funds, stocks, etc.)

3. If you still need money, consider a private student loan

Private student loans are offered through banks, credit unions, and other financial institutions. Work with your child to find the lender that offers the lowest interest rates and loan repayment options that work for you.

When cosigning a private student for your child, be sure you can both answer these questions:
• When will the first loan payment be due?
• How much will the monthly payment amount be? (This might depend on the repayment option you choose. See your options with a student loan repayment calculator.)
• What’s the interest rate?
• Is the interest rate fixed or variable (meaning, is it always the same or can it change?)

Pro tip:
Cosigning a loan is more than just signing a piece of paper. Cosigners are equally responsible for making sure payments are made on time. Missed and late payments could trigger late fees. Plus, late payments might be reported to consumer reporting agencies, impacting your credit score.

You’re on the right track
By starting early, following the 1-2-3 approach, and having open conversations with your child, you can help them make a great investment in their future.
